

Men of October hit it out of the park!

Robert Genn, sitting in his Badge Easel, painting as he always did, joyously and because it was what he most liked to do. In his recent retrospective show entitled "Honouring a Life of Painting", a show mounted by four galleries spaced across Canada, his 60 piece show nearly sold out. The Mayberry Gallery in Toronto, Canada House Gallery in Banff, Hambleton Galleries in Kelowna, and The White Rock Gallery in White Rock each had fifteen pieces representing the last fifty years of Robert's career and the pre show excitement did not disappoint. Like the culmination of a baseball season ending with the World Series, the men of October always have to pull it together to hit it out of the park. Robert's show was no different, interest was high, expectations were intense and crowds formed to honour the man and buy the last pieces available on the market. In all aspects the show was a success. Robert would have loved to have been here. The show will hang until November 9th.
